Low Impact Conduct Guidelines

Stick To the Trail - Traveling on trail leaves room for wildlife and their homes. Shortcutting trails causes erosion. Be ready to get muddy and step right through puddles. Boots dry overnight; plants take years to recover.

Share Our Trails - We all enjoy Open Space & Mountain Parks in different ways. Pay attention, expect to encounter others and be courteous. Yield to all, but stay on the trail if you can. Break into groups of 16 or less. Keep cell phones and electronic devices out of sound and out of sight.

Manage Your Dog - Keeping your dog in control keeps people, dogs, livestock and wildlife safe. Others may not appreciate your dog's company; if not sure, ask before allowing your dog to approach them. Keep your dog nearby anc under control. Carry and use a leash as required.

Pick Up Poop - Dog poop stinks, is not natural to Open Space & Mountain Parks, and others can step in it. Pack a pick-up bag and always pick up your dog's poop -- wherever it's left.

Trash Your Trash - Please take out all trash--yours and others'. Even biodegradable materials, such as orange peels, apple cores and food scraps, take years to break down, and attract scavengers that harm other wildlife.

Leave It as You Find It - Picking flowers or berries, collecting rocks, cleaning climbing routes, marking trail with flour or flagging tape and similar activities may not seem to be a big deal, but it means others will have a less natural experience. These activities are also illegal. With millions of people visiting Open Space & Mountain parks, the less
